the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are undernourished has increased from 250 million to 800 million (FAO 1996).

There are a number of reasons for this increase. First, the world population has increased from 5 billion in 1987 to 6 billion in 1996, with a further 2 billion projected by the year 2025 (FAO 1996). Second, the world population is becoming increasingly urbanized, with 50% of the world population living in urban areas in 1996, compared with 30% in 1980 (FAO 1996). Third, the world population is becoming increasingly aged, with the proportion of the world population aged 65 and over increasing from 5% in 1980 to 10% in 1996 (FAO 1996).

Fourth, the world population is becoming increasingly mobile, with the number of people moving from rural to urban areas increasing from 10 million in 1980 to 20 million in 1996 (FAO 1996). Fifth, the world population is becoming increasingly educated, with the proportion of the world population aged 15 and over who are literate increasing from 50% in 1980 to 70% in 1996 (FAO 1996). Sixth, the world population is becoming increasingly employed, with the proportion of the world population aged 15 and over who are employed increasing from 40% in 1980 to 50% in 1996 (FAO 1996).

Seventh, the world population is becoming increasingly mobile, with the number of people moving from rural to urban areas increasing from 10 million in 1980 to 20 million in 1996 (FAO 1996). Eighth, the world population is becoming increasingly educated, with the proportion of the world population aged 15 and over who are literate increasing from 50% in 1980 to 70% in 1996 (FAO 1996). Ninth, the world population is becoming increasingly employed, with the proportion of the world population aged 15 and over who are employed increasing from 40% in 1980 to 50% in 1996 (FAO 1996).

Tenth, the world population is becoming increasingly mobile, with the number of people moving from rural to urban areas increasing from 10 million in 1980 to 20 million in 1996 (FAO 1996). Eleventh, the world population is becoming increasingly educated, with the proportion of the world population aged 15 and over who are literate increasing from 50% in 1980 to 70% in 1996 (FAO 1996). Twelfth, the world population is becoming increasingly employed, with the proportion of the world population aged 15 and over who are employed increasing from 40% in 1980 to 50% in 1996 (FAO 1996).

Thirteenth, the world population is becoming increasingly mobile, with the number of people moving from rural to urban areas increasing from 10 million in 1980 to 20 million in 1996 (FAO 1996). Fourteenth, the world population is becoming increasingly educated, with the proportion of the world population aged 15 and over who are literate increasing from 50% in 1980 to 70% in 1996 (FAO 1996). Fifteenth, the world population is becoming increasingly employed, with the proportion of the world population aged 15 and over who are employed increasing from 40% in 1980 to 50% in 1996 (FAO 1996).

Sixteenth, the world population is becoming increasingly mobile, with the number of people moving from rural to urban areas increasing from 10 million in 1980 to 20 million in 1996 (FAO 1996). Seventeenth, the world population is becoming increasingly educated, with the proportion of the world population aged 15 and over who are literate increasing from 50% in 1980 to 70% in 1996 (FAO 1996). Eighteenth, the world population is becoming increasingly employed, with the proportion of the world population aged 15 and over who are employed increasing from 40% in 1980 to 50% in 1996 (FAO 1996).
